AGRICULTI IR AL INTERESTS LATE USE OF GARDEN SPACE.

"Don't waste that valuable garden space," declares one county horticultural agent, "now that you have gotten a season's crop from it. Some space can be given to late spinach, a vegetable always useful, and foremost in the list of vitamine foods. But for most of your space, sow a cover crop find economize in a useful way, supplying your soil with rich green humus, and eliminating much of the need for costly stable manure."

To follow early cubbage, lettuce, beets, strawherries and the like, timothy or Italian tye grass is a useful crop to plow under in the late fail, suggests the horticultural export. And this is convenient for early crops the next year. To follow late fail crops, there is nothing much better than ryo and vetch. Experience has taught un that one need not be afraid of reduced yields if the cover crop is supplemented with lime and proper chemical fertilizers, he says.

SEPTEMBER FARM FACTS.

If cabbage heads begin to crack before one in ready to use them, they may be been removed; some use other sorts of heavy green crops: while still others use sawdust. In Ohio it is a common practice to cover the sliage with floor sweepings of chaff and grain after threshing. The grain in the chaff cover makes his appearance again in The skipper's Scheme. It's great.

Hens that delay moulting will be slow in singification in a great with floor sweepings of chaff and grain after threshing. The grain in the chaff will sprout, makes an excellent cover and excludes the air from the silage. This practice may be good if the grain in the chaff does not have more value as poultry feed. In every case, say the hens scratch shed. Gather after one or two heavy frosts and store in a dry shed. They are rich in expensive ferful and the new state tax which goes into soak the covering thoroughly with we fasture policy will prevail, showing only the best and costllest photoplays obtainable.
